Easement Analysis

Introduction

An Easement Analysis is used to determine if any pre-converted easements, new easements or other interests which affect the current title, will affect a new parcel for which a Transform Approval Certificate (TAC) has been created but not acted upon. The easement analysis will also determine if the interest should be added to any remaining portion of the source parcel.

The Saskatchewan Land Surveyor that has submitted the new plan of survey for a surface subdivision may request an easement analysis be performed at that time. However anyone may request an easement analysis in conjunction with a new plan of subdivision that has a valid TAC and for which title/s have not yet been issued.

A Discharge of Interest (Easement) may be considered for submission to the Registry rather than using an easement analysis. In the case of a discharge, the easement interest holder and subsequent interest holders must consent to the discharge.
